Few glimpse of his viva voce of Mrs. Khushbu Agarwal

Impact of COVID-19 Pandemic on International Higher Education and Student Mobility

- COVID-19 has disturbed international higher education which resulted in four out of 10 students has cancel or postpone their plans to study abroad (QS, 2019)
- Between March and July 2020, plentiful surveys have been conducted. A number of these studies have pinned a focus on India and indicated that the majority of Indian students applying to universities abroad are unlikely about to cancel or delay their study abroad plans (57% of Indians, according to a British Council estimate).
- The British Council conducted survey on over 10,000 Chinese students, and asked about the priorities while conceiving their plans for overseas education, 87% of the respondents rated "personal safety" as well as 70% of the respondents rated "health and well-being" as their major concern while taking decision to study abroad (Durnin, 2020).
- A survey conducted on Indian students found that the three key factors that determined their choice of destination were safety, employability and reputation (QS-I GAUIGI, 2020).
- Pandemic also created an occasion for countries that were "senders" traditionally of international students to become host destinations, although this requires strategic planning. For example, as India the new National Education Policy aims to switch the country from being a "sender", to becoming a destination country for students in the region (Ministry of Human Resource Development, Government of India, 2020).

ICFAI University Jharkhand organized the final Viva voce of our scholar Ms Khushbu Agarwal on Friday 10th August, 2022. The topic of his research was "Factors Influencing Aspirants' Choice Decision to Study Abroad". He completed his journey under the guidance of Dr Rumna Bhattacharyya, Associate Professor, IU Jharkhand.
